PROF. ELKIN WANTS THE NATIVES TO BRACE UP

Says That the Hawaiians Ought to Try and Produce Some First Class Men of Affairs.

W. B. Elkin, whose newspaper controversy with the late Editor W. N. Armstrong is well-remembered here, is now a professor of philosophy in the Missouri State University. The Hilo Herald prints a letter of his to Rev. S. L. Desha in which he urges better education for the Hawaiians. Prof. Elkin says at the outset: "I suppose by this time you have got county government, or local government of some sort. But in order to make the most of the opportunities thus arising the Hawaiians need better education. You know that this is the Educational Age, par excellence. Every people needs intelligence of the highest kind to enable it to look after its own affairs and best interests these days. The Hawaiians should have some good lawyers, doctors and journalists—all first-class men—as well as teachers and preachers. But what are they doing to get them?"

"I enclose you a clipping from a recent copy of the Baltimore Sun to give you an idea of what the Filipinos are doing at the present time. The Hawaiians, I suppose, need never expect to obtain independence again, as the Filipinos hope to do. There are too few of them now left, and too many Americans, English, Japs and Portuguese on the islands. But they should aim to have a large voice in the affairs of government, and exercise a force in industrial life, agriculture, fishing, trade and the professions. How is this to be done? By means of more education, by sending a number of the best Hawaiian students every year to the mainland to get knowledge of American history, law, government and education; in a word, a knowledge of American civilization."

"I had once a great plan to get Carnegie to give a number of scholarships to educate Hawaiians in American universities. I went to New York City to see him about the matter, but the scheme did not succeed. I have also tried to have a number of free scholarships provided at Stanford University, and at Cornell University. For a time it seemed as if the Stanford plan would be carried out. President Jordan was much interested, and brought the matter before the board of trustees; but they declined to take the desired action. One of the chief difficulties in the way of getting anything done by the people of the mainland for the education of Hawaiians, so far as I can see, is that the Hawaiians are doing so little for themselves."

Prof. Elkin makes three propositions to the Hawaiians:

I. To meet the withdrawal of the Bishop scholarships for Hawaiians at Oahu College by establishing three times as many of their own. This would answer Mr. Bishop's challenge, "open the eyes of the missionary children" and give the ablest Hawaiian boys and girls a chance to enter mainland universities. Prof. Elkin suggests that the expenses be borne by the ex-Queen, Princes David and Cupid, the Parkers, Campbells, etc.

II. Establish a Territorial University with government scholarships for the education of young men and women abroad.

III. The Hawaiian delegate to Congress should make it his business to secure federal aid for higher education in Hawaii. Hawaii receives at present a few thousand dollars a year from the U. S. government for the Experiment Station, but nothing for university or higher education. Forty-eight states and territories have already received important federal aid for higher education. See the Report of the U. S. Commissioner of Education for 1903, Vol. 1, p. 1179, that is, all the states and territories, except Hawaii, Indian Territory and Alaska. And of these, Indian Territory and Alaska have received federal aid for education in many ways that Hawaii has not. Hawaii has a claim here that should be pushed, and pushed vigorously and continuously.

Prof. Elkin concludes as follows:

"I have now outlined my latest plan for improving the education, the industrial conditions, and the civilization of Hawaii. You are a good speaker, and can present a matter well. If you and King, and Kanuha, and Nakuina, and others will start a campaign of education, agitate, make the question of government scholarships a political question, if necessary, you will carry the thing through in a few years. There are some Hawaiian students at Stanford University now, some of my old students. But without assistance such as I have indicated, they are not likely to accomplish much, except ruin their health. Students can study, and do something at the same time to support themselves, but not all. There is hope for the Filipinos, for they are aggressive, they are doing something for themselves. And there are many young people in Hawaii who would act likewise, if they were given an opportunity. This is my plea."

HAPPY TIN WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. O'Dowda
Entertain Their Friends,

With progressive Pedro, a sociable feast and delightful music, comprised in a whole evening of neighborly fore-gathering and mirth. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas O'Dowda of Ewa were assisted on February 1 in the celebration of their tin wedding. As fairly well sophisticated people know—without the mnemonic assistance of the Emerald Isle's dialect—a "tin" wedding is due on the tenth anniversary of a couple's marriage. Well, the host and hostess on this occasion were ten years wedded on Thursday—blissfully as all their friends are aware and blessedly as their cozy home and a bright cluster of little "olive branches" fully attest. So with due notice they, called in their guests with some intimate city friends, to share their seasoned felicity.

For the celebration the beautiful pavilion in the midst of the plantation's park, directly in front of the O'Dowda home, was obtained and fitly prepared. This is a truly elegant place of assembly, well lighted with electricity. Blossoms of the bougainvillea vine composed a mound of color upon the billiard table, whereon were arranged a great array of gifts appropriate to the event. Ferns, palms, etc., completed the decorations of the hall, which had been arranged by the ladies of the plantation. Speaking of the presents, they revealed the remarkable variety of useful and ornamental articles that can be made out of tin. Besides there was proof that some of their friends thought tin not good enough for Mr. and Mrs. O'Dowda, for the estimate of their qualities was exemplified in some instances by the glitter of sterling silverware.

During the progress of the Pedro contest delicious fruit punch with floating strawberries was served at the card tables. The play resulted as follows, the prizes being all handsome: Lady's prize, Mrs. Douglas; gentleman's, Mr. Gouveia; lady's booby prize, Miss Koelling; gentleman's, Mr. Nyswander; flinch table prize, Mrs. West.

Music being next in order, Mrs. Crane rendered a song that elicited long-lasting applause and general expressions of admiration. A quartet consisting of Messrs. Melchers, Mann, Edmunds and Greenfield then sang in manner bringing an irresistible encore. Solos were rendered by Messrs. Edmunds and Melchers which evoked enthusiastic plaudits.

Following the music refreshments were served upon the small tables disposed about the hall. They consisted of a variety of toothsome sandwiches, coffee, ice cream and wedding cake. Throughout the repast unconstrained sociability reigned. Manager Renton's proposal of the health of the host and hostess, with gracefully expressed wishes for their long-continued happiness, brought the company to its feet and, in response to an added call by Mr. Renton, three rousing cheers were given for Mr. and Mrs. O'Dowda. In response Mr. O'Dowda, after uttering the hearty thanks of his wife and himself for the attendance and felicitations of their guests, regaled them with a series of stories illustrating Hawaiian wit.

The social time was prolonged until midnight, when the party dispersed with renewed congratulations to the hospitable couple. Those present were as follows: Mr. and Mrs. George F. Renton, Mrs. G. Fisher, Mr. H. S. Fisher, Miss Fisher, Mrs. J. Guld, Miss Guld, Mr. A. S. Guld, Mr. and Mrs. David Douglas, Mr. and Mrs. McKeever, Mrs. Boswell, Miss Boswell, Mr. and Mrs. John Evanson, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. PAGAN OFFERINGS TO FIRE GODDESS

The Hilo Herald says:

In days of old it was customary for the Hawaiian chiefs to make pilgrimages to Kilauea and do homage to Pele by making offerings of pigs and "square face." The presents were given often with a view to appeasing the wrath of the goddess and it is in history where the late Queen Kapulani made a visit to Hilo during a lava flow and threw in a pig, whereupon the flow ceased.

Kahuna have been known to send their patients to Kilauea with red or white roosters and a bottle of gin as a cure-all for complaints of mind or body and the results have been various. Last Monday night the ceremony of making offerings to Pele was witnessed by the guide at the Volcano House and two or three of the guests. Manager Lycurgus was in Hilo, so he missed the sight of his life.

One of the guests of the hotel says five Hawaiians came up to the hotel late Monday afternoon carrying a live pig, a bottle of gin, a rooster, a bottle of brandy and a piece of red cloth.

In the party were two women and three men, one of the latter being very old and blind. The leader of the party asked for Jones, the guide, and said they wanted to go down to the crater in obedience to instructions from a Kahuna in Honolulu who told them they must go to Kilauea and make gifts to Pele. They would have to be at the crater on Monday night because the moon would be right for the first part of the ceremony and they would have to go two weeks later for the final act.

Jones went down to the pit with them and on the way learned that the blind man, whose name is Brown, was once a guide at the crater and the hocus pocus was in his behalf. After reaching the brink they first threw in the live pig, at the same time repeating incantations. The pig was followed by the rooster, gin and brandy, and then there were more prayers. The red cloth was then thrown into the pit and finally a sealed letter was dropped over the bank to be destroyed with the other articles by the burning lava.

Jones, the guide, remained with the party throughout the ceremony and returned with them after midnight. He said the men and women had prayed steadily for more than two hours. The blind man did not recover his sight according to schedule, and the party is expected back at the crater on the night of February 12.
